DOGS: Playing for Life and Training/Adoption Center
Increasing quality of life, socialization, successful adoption matches and ultimately saving more lives of shelter dogs in New Mexico!

developed in partnership with Aimee Sadler

No donation of supplies or service is too small – THANK YOU!!

This project relies on NMPA! staff and volunteers, expert programming partners and the generosity of local, state and national businesses along with everyday people all across New Mexico who wish to help implement large scale proven solutions to some of our state's most pressing homeless pet challenges and help bring the NMPA! Playing for Life and Training/Adoption Center to fruition. (The location will be announced in March.) NMPA co-founder and architectural designer, Kurt Schlough, is providing pro-bono design and project mgmt services for the build out. He's updated the material and services needs for the NMPA space that are still needed below. THANK YOU to everyone who has helped whittle this list down to where it currently sits.
